5. The job displays as Accepted on your screen. When arriving at the job location, select Start. If there is a need to delay the job, select Delay and then choose a delay reason and an appropriate time frame.

Delaying a Job Before You Start

- a. If the job needs to be delayed, select delay and provide a reason.
- b. Specify the time interval for the amount of time the job needs to be delayed. If the Will Wait option is selected, the current job will be maintained. If a time interval is selected, a new job is assigned.
- 6. Upon finishing the job, select Complete. If there is a reason to delay the job, select Delay. If you need to delay a job after you start, you will need select a delay reason; however, you do not select a time frame. If for some reason the job was accidentally started, or needs to go back into the queue for future completion, select Undo Start.
